3 Top Pot Stocks To Watch in 2020

By Jim Pearce and the team of analysts at Investing Daily

There is no denying that pot stocks are the golden opportunity right now. With Canada passing full legalization for both recreational and medicinal cannabis, Trump signing the Farm Bill which effectively reclassified Hemp and removed it from the list of Schedule I drugs, and having over 30 states having some form of legalization...it seems like Cannabis could be the next gold rush.

But I'm not going to lie… the Cannabis industry is like the wild west for many investors.

There have been dozens of companies come and go already... and it's getting harder and harder to tell which companies are going to go the distance and which ones are just going to burn out.

Much like the Gold Rush of the 1850s, this new "Green Rush" has an incredible amount of opportunity...but it's not without risk.

I'm not a fan of unwarranted risk...which is why I'm happy that you made the right choice in picking up this report.

Hello, I'm Jim Pearce, Chief Analyst for Investing Daily with over 36 years of investing experience and I'm about to reveal the 3 top Pot stocks to watch in 2020.

I'm going to give you a full report on each pick… complete with the ticker symbol and a write up on their performance.

I'll also give you my honest opinion on whether the stock is a buy...or if I believe you should stay far, far away from it.

Please, Before you invest a single red cent into any pot stock…I urge you to read this.

Thank you for downloading your personal copy of this special report… I look forward to helping you reduce your risk and ramp up your profits.

Let's jump in.

Top Pot Stock To Watch # 1- Aurora Cannabis

(NYSE: ACB, TSX: ACB)

What Is Aurora Cannabis?

Headquartered in Edmonton, Canada, Aurora Cannabis produces and distributes a wide variety of medical marijuana products.

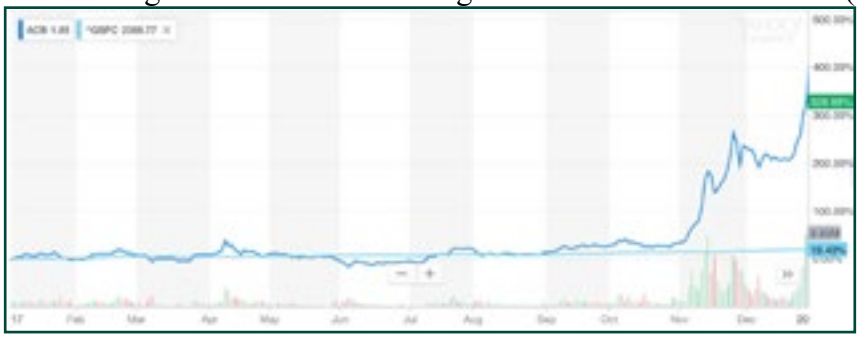

The company's products consist of dried cannabis and cannabis oil, CanniMed vegan capsules, and hemp products. The company also sells vaporizers, vaporizer accessories, and herb mills.

Aurora Cannabis (market cap: $5 billion) operates in 22 countries and holds partnership agreements with several drug retail chains for the distribution, sale, and marketing of medical cannabis products. Aurora also operates CanvasRX, a network of counseling centers for marijuana medical treatment.

In October 2018, Aurora changed its OTCQX ticker symbol ACBFF to "ACB" on the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE), and continued to trade under ACB on the Toronto Stock Exchange (TSX).

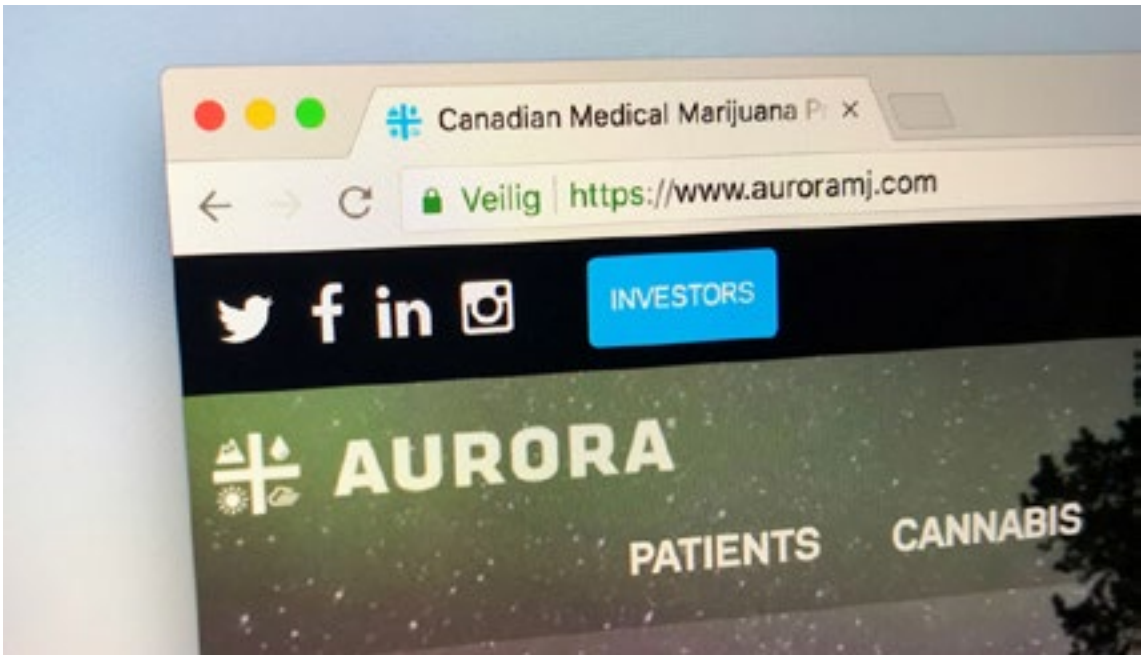

How Has Aurora Cannabis Performed?

- Over the past 12 months, Aurora Cannabis has lost 19.9% compared to a loss of 7.2% for the S&P 500.
- Over the past two years, Aurora Cannabis has gained 196.5% compared to a gain of 11.1% for the S&P 500.
- How Has Aurora Cannabis Performed In 2017/2018?
- In 2017, Aurora Cannabis gained 328.6% versus a gain of 9.4% for the S&P 500 (see chart).

- In 2018 year-to-date, Aurora Cannabis has lost 46.2% compared to a loss of 7.6% for the S&P 500.

Aurora Cannabis Forecast And Prediction For 2020

Aurora Cannabis' operating results have been solid. For its full fiscal year 2018, Aurora Cannabis racked up revenue growth of 206% compared to the previous year. Net income moved to a profit of C$71.9 million from a loss of C$13 million in fiscal 2017.

The volume of cannabis that Aurora produced in 2018 jumped by 85% on a year-over-year basis to 5.6 million kilograms, while the amount sold grew by 111% YoY to 5 million kilograms

As industry tailwinds accelerate, especially in the company's home country of Canada, Aurora's revenue and earnings should remain on an upward trajectory in 2020.

As a mid-cap stock, Aurora occupies the valuation "sweet spot." It's small enough to confer outsized growth — the sort of growth that usually eludes

Big Pharma blue chips. But Aurora is big enough to withstand the volatility that probably lies ahead in 2020.

Another enticing aspect of Aurora is its suitability as a takeover target. The fast-growing marijuana industry is consolidating; a major beverage or tobacco company could come along as a suitor, attracted not just by the company's broad product portfolio but also by its entrenched foothold in Canada. America's northern neighbor holds strategic value in the booming marijuana industry.

Aurora Cannabis isn't for risk-averse investors; its rapid expansion funded via the issuance of common stock should give pause to conservative traders. But unlike many of its rivals in canna-business, Aurora Cannabis enjoys meaningful earnings and revenue growth.

Top Pot Stock To Watch # 2 - Supreme Cannabis

(OTC: SPRWF, TSXV: FIRE)

What Is Supreme Cannabis?

Toronto-based Supreme Cannabis produces and distributes consumer-centric proprietary cannabis plant products.

Supreme owns 7Acres, the first licensed producer in Canada for high-quality cannabis. The model is business-to-business; 7Acres doesn't deal with packaging, retail sales, doctor education, or clinics.

Instead, Supreme Cannabis sells its product at the business level and lets it filter down to whatever market desires it.

How Has Supreme Cannabis Stock Performed?

What is Supreme Cannabis' Stock History?

- Over the past 12 months, SPRWF shares have fallen 40% whereas the S&P 500 has lost 6%.
- Over the past two years, SPRWF shares have gained 16.1% whereas the S&P 500 has gained 14.5%.

How Has Supreme Cannabis Performed in 2017/2018?

- In 2017, SPRWF shares gained 55% whereas the S&P 500 gained 19.4%.
- In 2018, SPRWF shares fell 40% whereas the S&P 500 lost 7.5%.

Overall Supreme Cannabis Forecast and Prediction for 2020

Marijuana stocks will probably experience a roller coaster ride this year. Those firms that obtain outside investment are likely to grow and meet demand. But Supreme Cannabis has no partners, whereas several rivals have big consumer names backing them.

Supreme Cannabis is losing money and offers nothing special. Marijuana remains an exciting investment opportunity, but the weakest companies are about to get weeded out (pun intended).

When the cannabis sector shake-out finally occurs in 2022, Supreme Cannabis probably won't survive. The company may have the magical word "cannabis" in its title, but it has red ink on its balance sheet.

Avoid this stock.

(But we'll be keeping an eye on it and let you know if and when that changes)

Top Pot Stock To Watch #3 - Canopy Growth

(NYSE: CGC, TSX: WEED)

What Is Canopy Growth?

Based in Smith Falls, Canada, Canopy Growth grows and sells medical cannabis in Canada and around the world. Its products include dried flowers, oils and concentrates, soft gel capsules, and hemp.

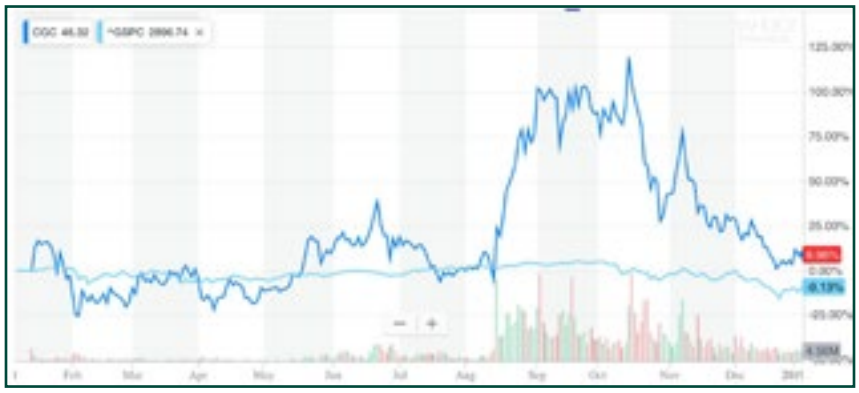

The company offers its products under the Tweed, Black Label, Spectrum Cannabis, DNA Genetics, Leafs By Snoop, Bedrocan Canada, CraftGrow, and Foria brand names.

Founded in 2014, Canopy Growth by 2016 was Canada's first cannabis "unicorn" with a $1 billion dollar valuation. The company went on to become the first federally regulated, publicly traded cannabis producer in North America.

In January 2018, the company went public on the Toronto Stock Exchange (TSX) under the ticker WEED, then in the following May began trading on the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE) as CGC.

How Has Canopy Growth Stock Performed?

Over the past 12 months, CGC has gained 8.9% compared to a loss of 9.1% for the S&P 500 (see chart).

How Has Canopy Growth Performed In 2017/2018?

Since Canopy Growth started trading on the NYSE on May 24, 2018, CGC has lost 11% compared to a loss of 7.9% for the S&P 500.

Overall Canopy Growth Forecast And Prediction For 2020

I'm usually skeptical when analysts dismiss shaky operating results and advise patience as a growth company tries to gain its footing. But in Canopy Growth's case, taking the long view is warranted.

Constellation Brands is a Fortune 500 company and its investment in Canopy is one of the best assurances for investors that Canopy faces a future of outsized growth.

Constellation Brands' sales and marketing infrastructure are entrenched and global — and Canopy Growth can tap it. I wouldn't be surprised to see Constellation may eventually acquire all of Canopy, which would prove an immediate boon for CGC shareholders.

With the help of Constellation, Canopy Growth is expanding production capacity, developing new products, penetrating overseas markets, and eyeing the acquisition of kindred rivals. Canopy's Tweed marijuana brand already is one of the most recognized on the market.

As senior citizens and conservative lawmakers start embracing what used to be called the "devil's weed," you know it's time to add a pot stock to your portfolio.

Canopy Growth stands in stark contrast to the slew of risky marijuana penny stocks that are destined to disappoint investors.

The time to invest in Canopy Growth is now, as it stands on the cusp of integrating into the traditional consumer sector. The company's marijuana products stand ready to muscle their way onto your grocer's shelf.

Final Thoughts:

Out of the dozens/hundreds of "budding" pot stocks on the market, these 3 are the ones to watch…. 2 of them (Aurora and Canopy) that I'd highly recommend you add to your portfolio immediately and one (Supreme Cannabis) that I'd recommend you stay far, far away from.

In addition to these 3 stocks, I wanted to leave you with what I believe could be the most lucrative "pot stock" in the world.

So much so that I believe it could put $55,000 or more in your pocket...this year alone.

Best of all, it's 100% legal and pays out dividends like clockwork..and will continue to do so because while the federal government completely backs this company it also requires it to distribute 90% of any excess net income to shareholders...without fail.

But the most interesting thing about this pick… it doesn't actually deal with Cannabis at all… and it's the only company of it's kind operating in the marijuana market.

Let's call it Company X.

BONUS - Company X: The # 1 "Pot Stock" that MUST be in your portfolio

Company X is what I like to call "The Perfect Pot Stock."

It's incredibly stable, 100% legal, and backed by the full extent of the federal government. It's required to pay out dividends (I call them "Marijuana Payouts.") like clockwork.

For the first nine months of last year, the company took in $10 million, which also resulted in net income of $4.3 million. Backing out $1 million in preferred stock dividend payments, the net income for the company was $3.3 million.

As of this writing, Company X has over $57 million in cash on hand. The company is contractually guaranteed to receive almost $84 million in revenue over the next four years. The annual dividend is 2.42%.

How Has Company X's Stock Performed?

- Over the past year, Company X's shares have gained 114.5% whereas the S&P 500 has lost 7.8% (see chart).
- How Has Company X's Stock Performed in 2017/2018?
- In 2017, Company X rose 73% whereas the S&P 500 gained 19%.
- In 2018, Company X rose 93% whereas the S&P 500 lost 5%.

Company X has doubled its payouts TWICE in the last year alone

Leading to HUGE gains like these:

That's just a small sampling of the payouts my readers have pocketed...from one single pick.

If you'd like to tap into this pick and possibly generate over $55,000.00 this year alone (and there is no cap on how much you can generate, so the possibilities are limitless)...
